To the Lambton College Class of 2025:

It is an honour to address you today on this monumental day: your Convocation.

Of course, Convocation is not just one day. Convocation is the culmination of years of dedication. This day represents every late night and early morning and all the stress and effort. This day is every win, but it's also every loss, and every time you came back stronger to try again.

It's not going to get any easier now that you've graduated. I would apologize for being the bearer of bad news, but you've proven that you don't need easier.

You have all pursued your education because you are going to do great things in your careers and in our communities, and great things are not easy. There will undoubtedly be times in your lives when things are so hard you're not sure how you're going to get through. But if you're sitting here today, there is one thing you have learned above and beyond everything else in your time at Lambton College.

It's that you can, and you will. That is what your Convocation represents. Given the magnitude of this day, I have to admit that every year, my Convocation speech is a source of stress for me. After all, you deserve a speech that does justice to the years you've put into this achievement. It's also the educator in me. I can't help but want to send you out into our communities with one more lesson.

But this year, as I was contemplating what I would say to our graduates, I came to an important realization: you're going to live big lives, and do great things, and you might not remember what I stood up here and said to you at your Convocation. And that's okay. Because while you may not remember the words spoken today or even the specifics of the ceremony, you'll remember how you felt. There's a lesson in that. And that lesson is especially important for the Lambton College Class of 2025.

You aren't people who are just going out to get jobs now. You're going into careers in the industries and fields that form the backbone of our communities. You will be in the positions that impact our health, our safety, our prosperity, even our happiness and the way we live altogether. As educated and skilled college graduates, you will be the people who have the power to change an outcome for someone with nothing more than compassion, inclusion, or a little extra caring. Some of you will be there for the best days of people's lives. Some of you will be there for the worst. These are the most immense responsibilities I can think of. I wouldn't mention them if I weren't certain you've spent years at Lambton College preparing to have that kind of impact on the communities we call home.

Which brings us to this day. I hope you feel proud. I hope you feel hope. And I hope you feel ready to make a difference. In your work. In your life. In a moment. Of course, it's quite possible the people whose lives you change won't ever know your name. They might not recall what you said or even realize everything you did for them. And that's okay. Because they'll also remember how they felt. And they'll carry it with them and allow it to shape their lives as they go forward.

On behalf of Lambton College, I am asking you to take that feeling from the moment when your years of hard work propelled you across this stage and carry it with you.

The world is yours now, and we're all better for it.

Thank you.

Margaret Carter

June 10th & June 11th | 1:00 p.m. & 3:00 p.m. Ceremonies

Margaret has been a professor at Lambton College since 1999, teaching chemistry related courses in multiple programs – Chemical Production & Power Engineering Technology, Instrumentation & Control Engineering Technology, Chemical Lab Technician, Bio-Materials & Chemical Lab Analysis, Applied Manufacturing Management - Advanced Materials Processing and more. She was coordinator of CPET for some 5 years. She has a bachelor's degree in chemistry from the University of Waterloo, a master's degree in material science from Western University and a Teacher of Adults certificate from Lambton College. She has received the Innovative Teaching with Technology award from the Colleges Ontario, Vice-Presidents Academic, Educational Technology Committee.

Before teaching she worked for almost two decades in industry. Her focus in these jobs was analytical chemistry, usually in support of research and in the areas of building products, reinforced plastics and others. She was principal investigator for a two-year Canadian Space Agency project investigating the physics and chemistry of foam formation in the absence of gravity. For that project she worked with half of the original six Canadian astronauts and flew in parabolic-cycle zero gravity: in a plane flying a 10,000 ft roller coaster pattern.

Margaret is one of the early members of the research team at Lambton College, having a role in founding what is now the Chemical and Bioengineering analytical lab that supports the Bio-Industrial Process Research centre, the Lambton Water Centre and other research centres. She has worked on projects as diverse as mini-string DNA isolation to performance benchmarking peddle powered washing machines.
